AMBULATORY EEG INSTRUCTIONS with PET SCAN

Your physician has ordered an Ambulatory Electroencephalographic (EEG). This study is done on an outpatient basis. Electrodes are placed on the surface of your scalp which will be connected by thin wires that run down from your head to a recording unit. It is a noninvasive procedure and you will feel no pain.

In preparation for the Ambulatory EEG/PET scan you should plan the following:

- Bathe, wash and dry your hair thoroughly. Your scalp should be clean and free of oils, conditioners, hair sprays, etc... You will be unable to bathe or swim during the 24 hour test period. Water will severely damage the recording unit.

- If you take any medications, continue to take them as directed by their doctor.
